

RESIDENTIAL / FULL GUT RENOVATION

The Apartment

Interior design by Krystal Mason Adesman

From the bed, you can see the last light on the piano.

The open loft

Krystal Mason Adesman led the full gut renovation of her own apartment. A deep ceiling beam and a step across the floor mark the same spot in both photographs. Beyond them, a glass-walled bedroom now stands beside the dining table.

Before. The open floor viewed toward the kitchen.

After. The living area, kitchen and new glass enclosure.

A room within the loft

Two walls of glass wrap the bedroom. From the dining table, their dark frames make the corner easy to read. Look through the grid and the ceiling continues overhead into the room beyond.

The glass wall beside the dining area.

The glazed corner

Retrospective perspective study drawn from completed-room photographs. Unmeasured.

A. Two dark frames meet at the corner of the sleeping area.

B. The windows are visible through one wall, the dining and living areas through the other.

By the windows

The piano at the terrace doors.

From this side of the enclosure, the piano fills the window bay. From the bedroom, the same raised lid is a single diagonal in a grid of rectangles.